

Leading with Impact: Empowering Women Physicians for Leadership Roles

3-Session
Virtual Program

PROGRAM OVERVIEW

Women physicians continue to make remarkable strides in achieving equitable leadership representation in health care. However, a recent McKinsey study reported that while women comprise 75 percent of the workforce, only 32 percent hold the C-suite level, and only 4 percent are women of color, indicating that more improvement is necessary.

The MMS is collaborating with the Daniel Hanley Center for Health Leadership to offer a dynamic program tailored for busy women physicians interested in elevating their leadership potential in any health care setting.

The small-group, virtual format offers you the unique opportunity to reflect, learn, and share in a trusted space to accelerate applied learning in various topics, including leadership styles, communication tools, emotional intelligence, and fostering inclusion. Build your confidence to take on new leadership roles and lead teams to thrive.
